

THE NEXT ANALYST CHALLENGE SEASON 2

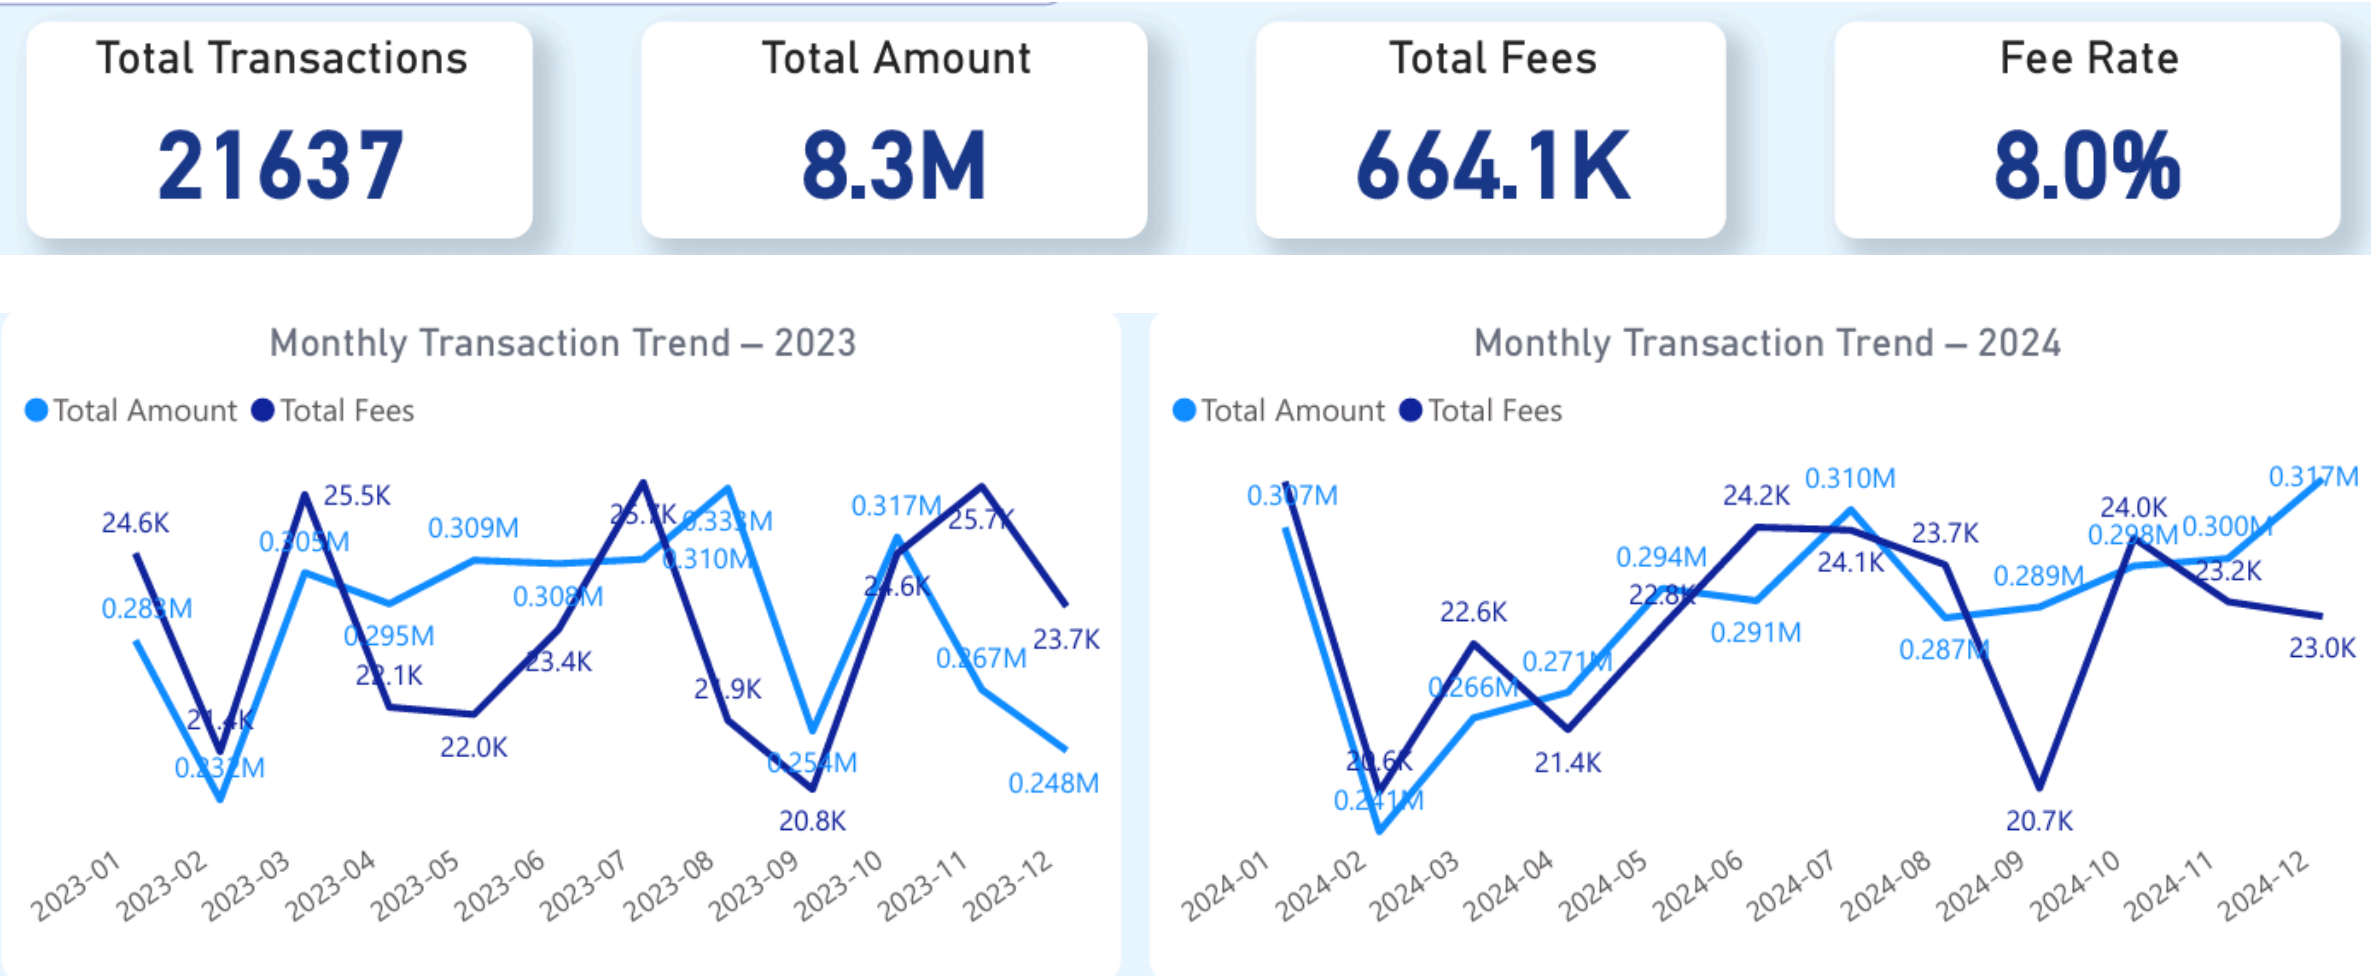

Presented by Bui Nguyen Thao Van
thaovanbn2201@gmail.com

Banking transactions overview (2023–2025)

Stable transaction growth supported by a sustainable fee structure.

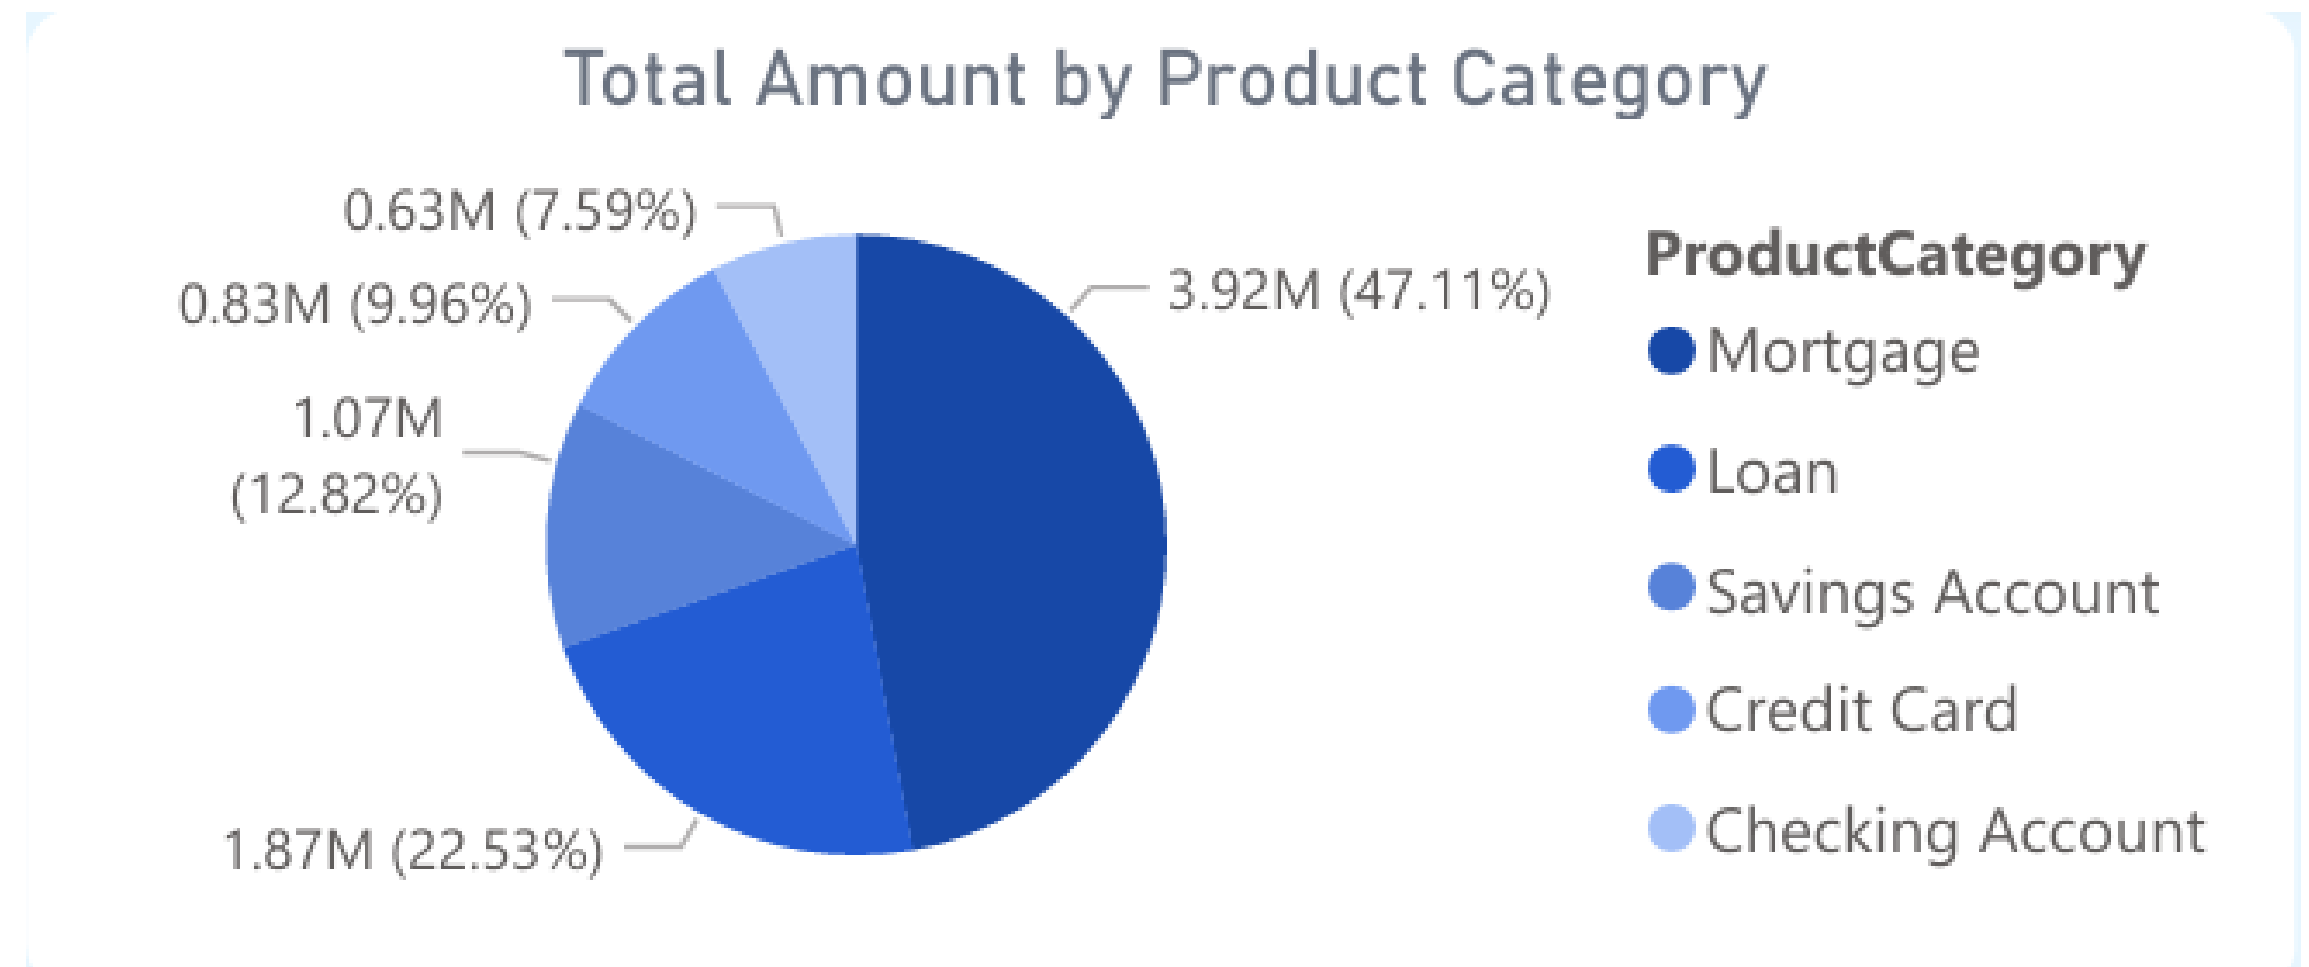

- Over 21K transactions with total transaction value of 8.3M
- Fee-based revenue remains stable at around 8%
- Transaction activity shows consistent momentum across years (2023–2024)

Product contribution and fee dynamics

Different products play different roles in value and fee generation.

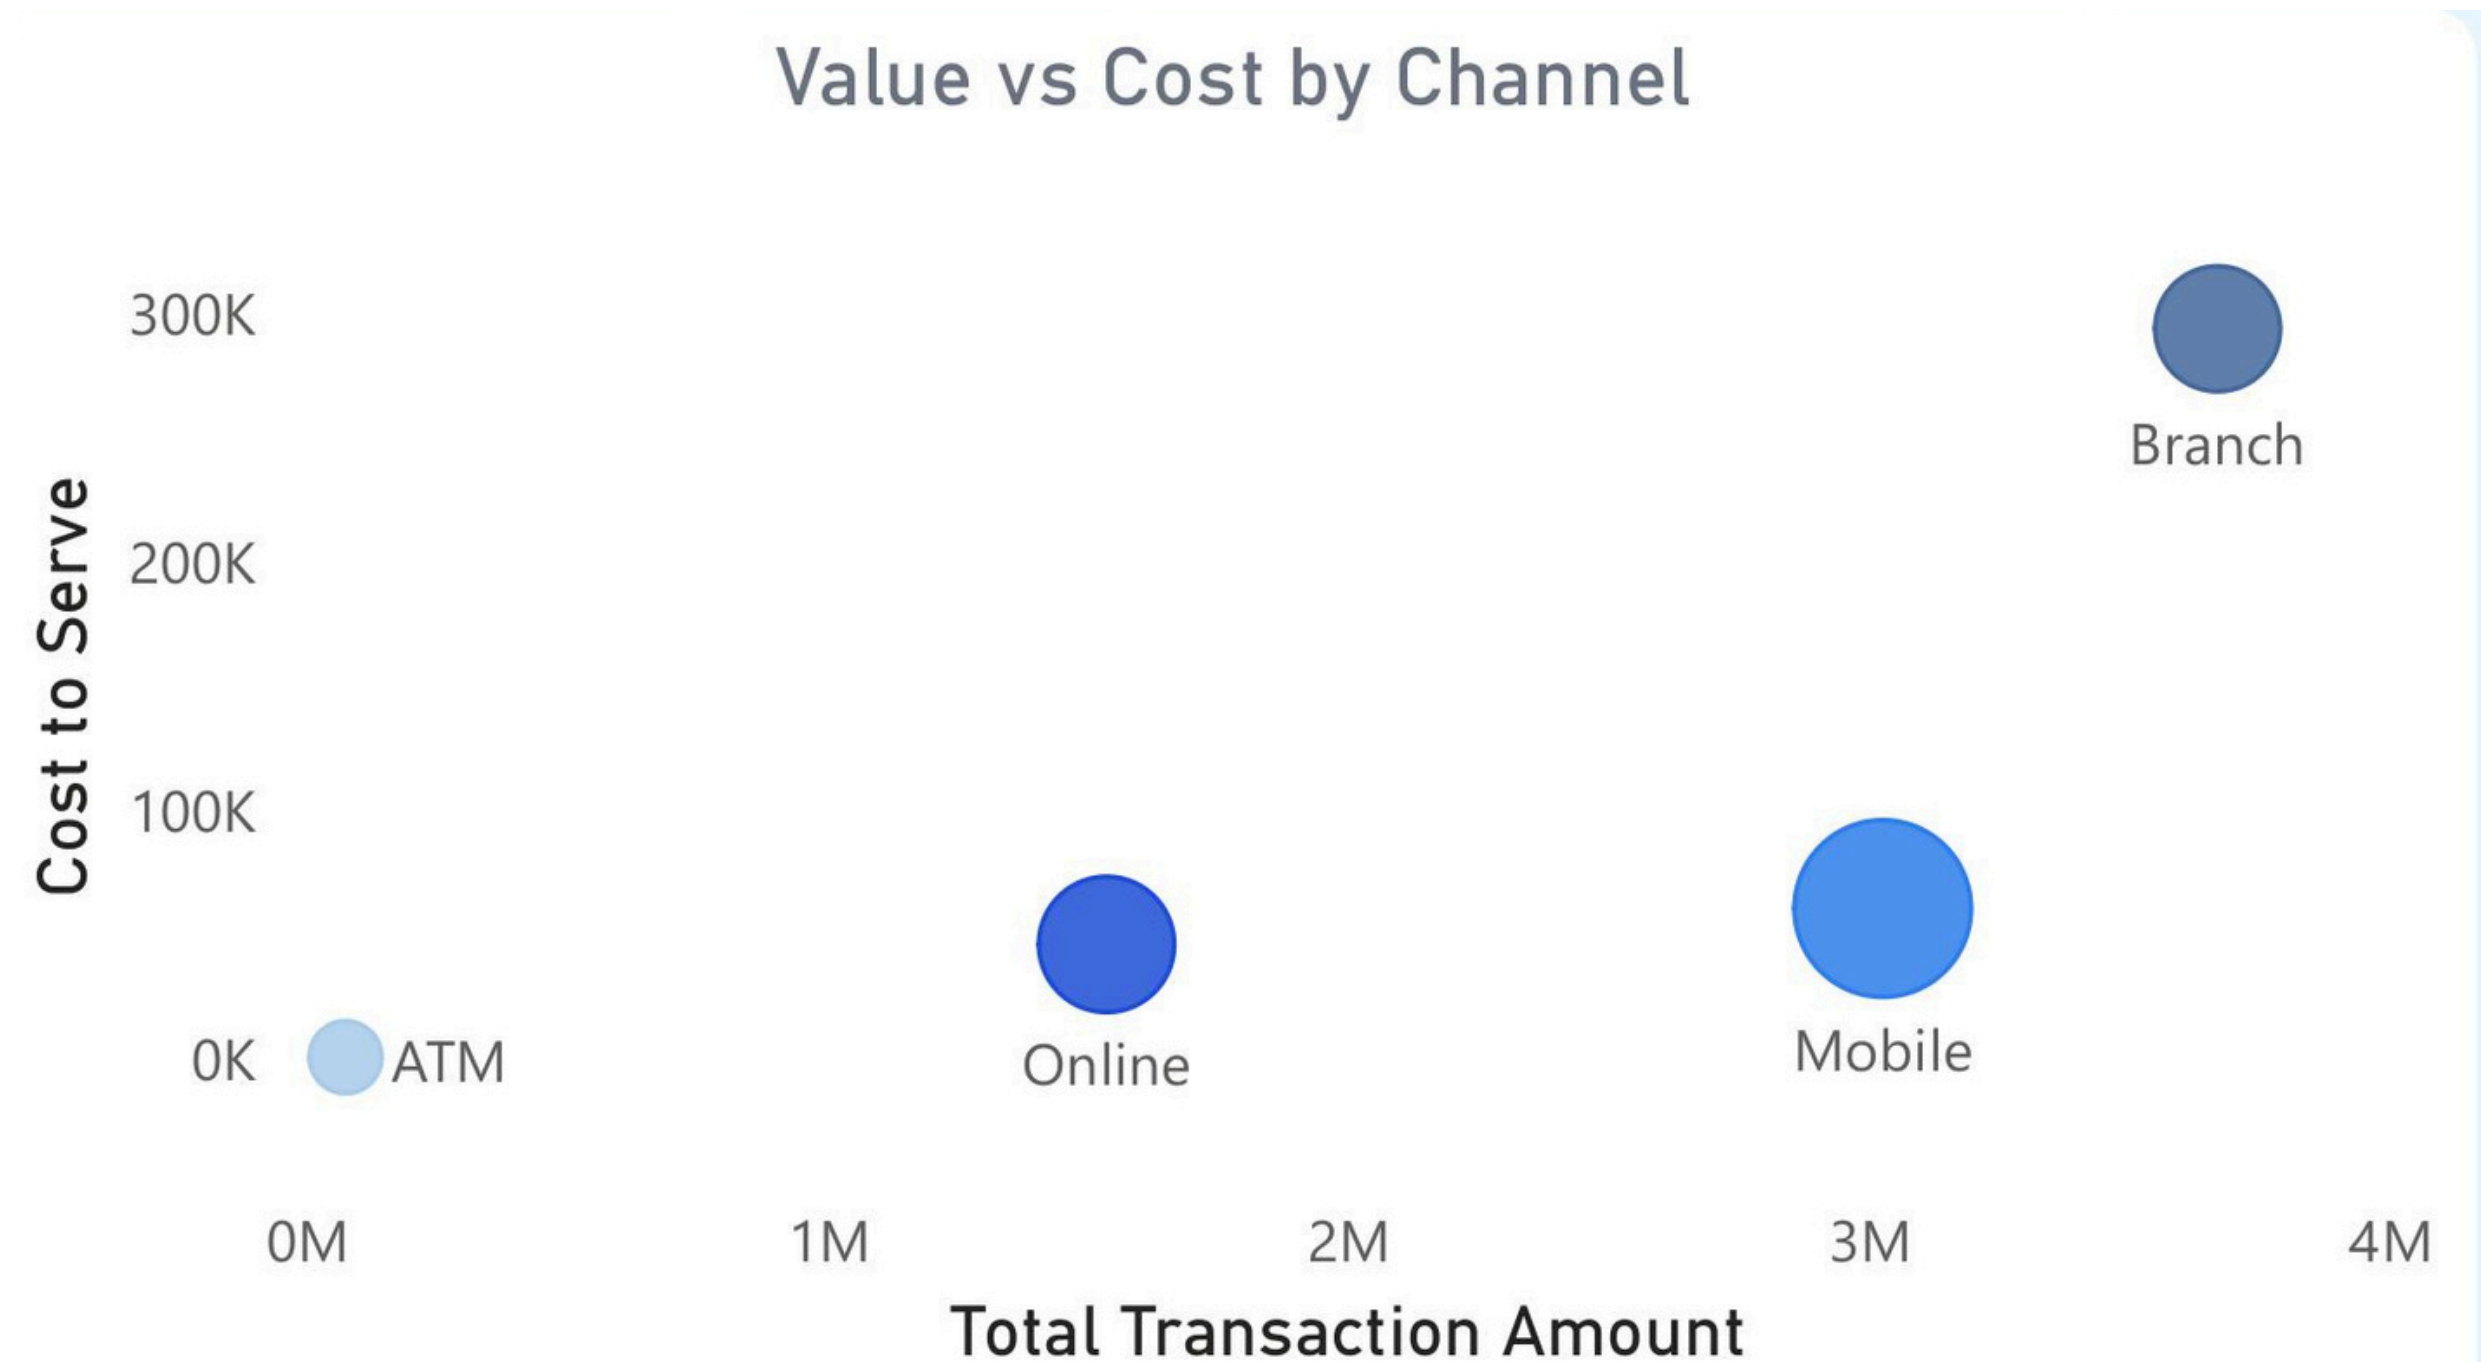

- Mortgage and Loan drive the majority of transaction value
- Credit Card generates higher fee contribution despite lower volume
- Savings and Checking provide scale but limited margin

Channel performance and cost efficiency

Digital channels scale efficiently, Branch delivers value at higher cost.

- Mobile and Online dominate transaction volume
- Branch has the highest average transaction value
- Branch also incurs the highest cost-to-serve

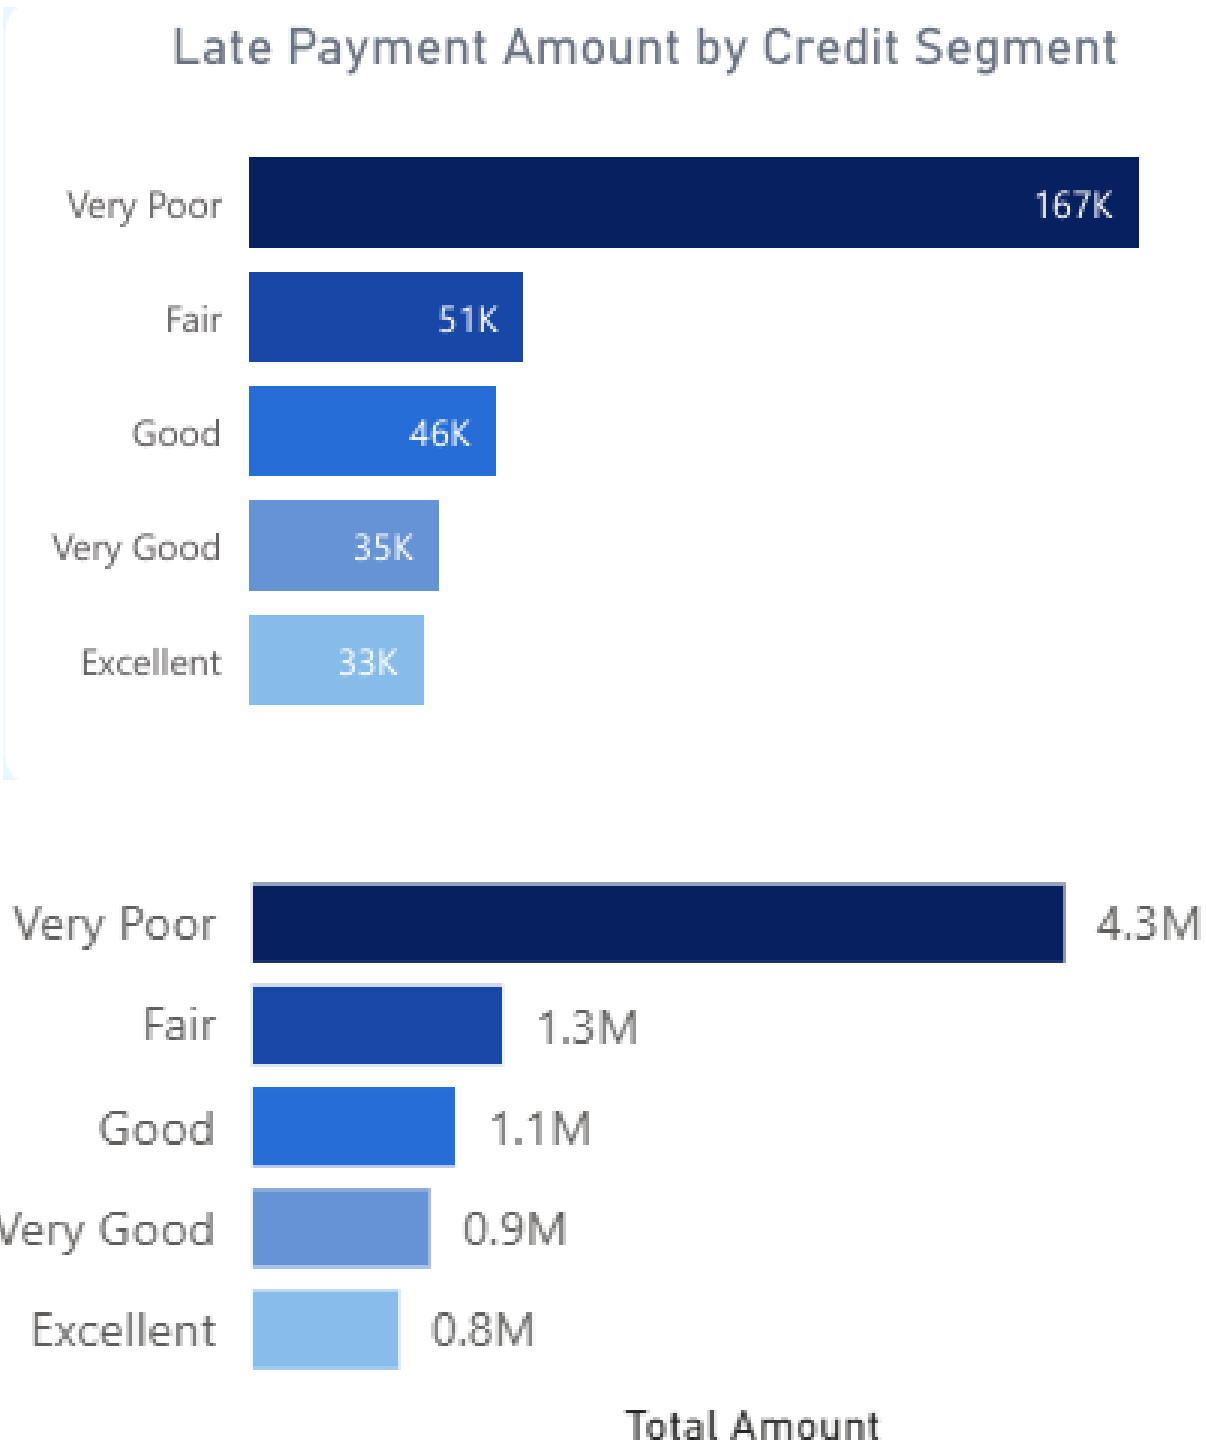

Customer risk concentration

Revenue growth comes with increasing risk exposure.

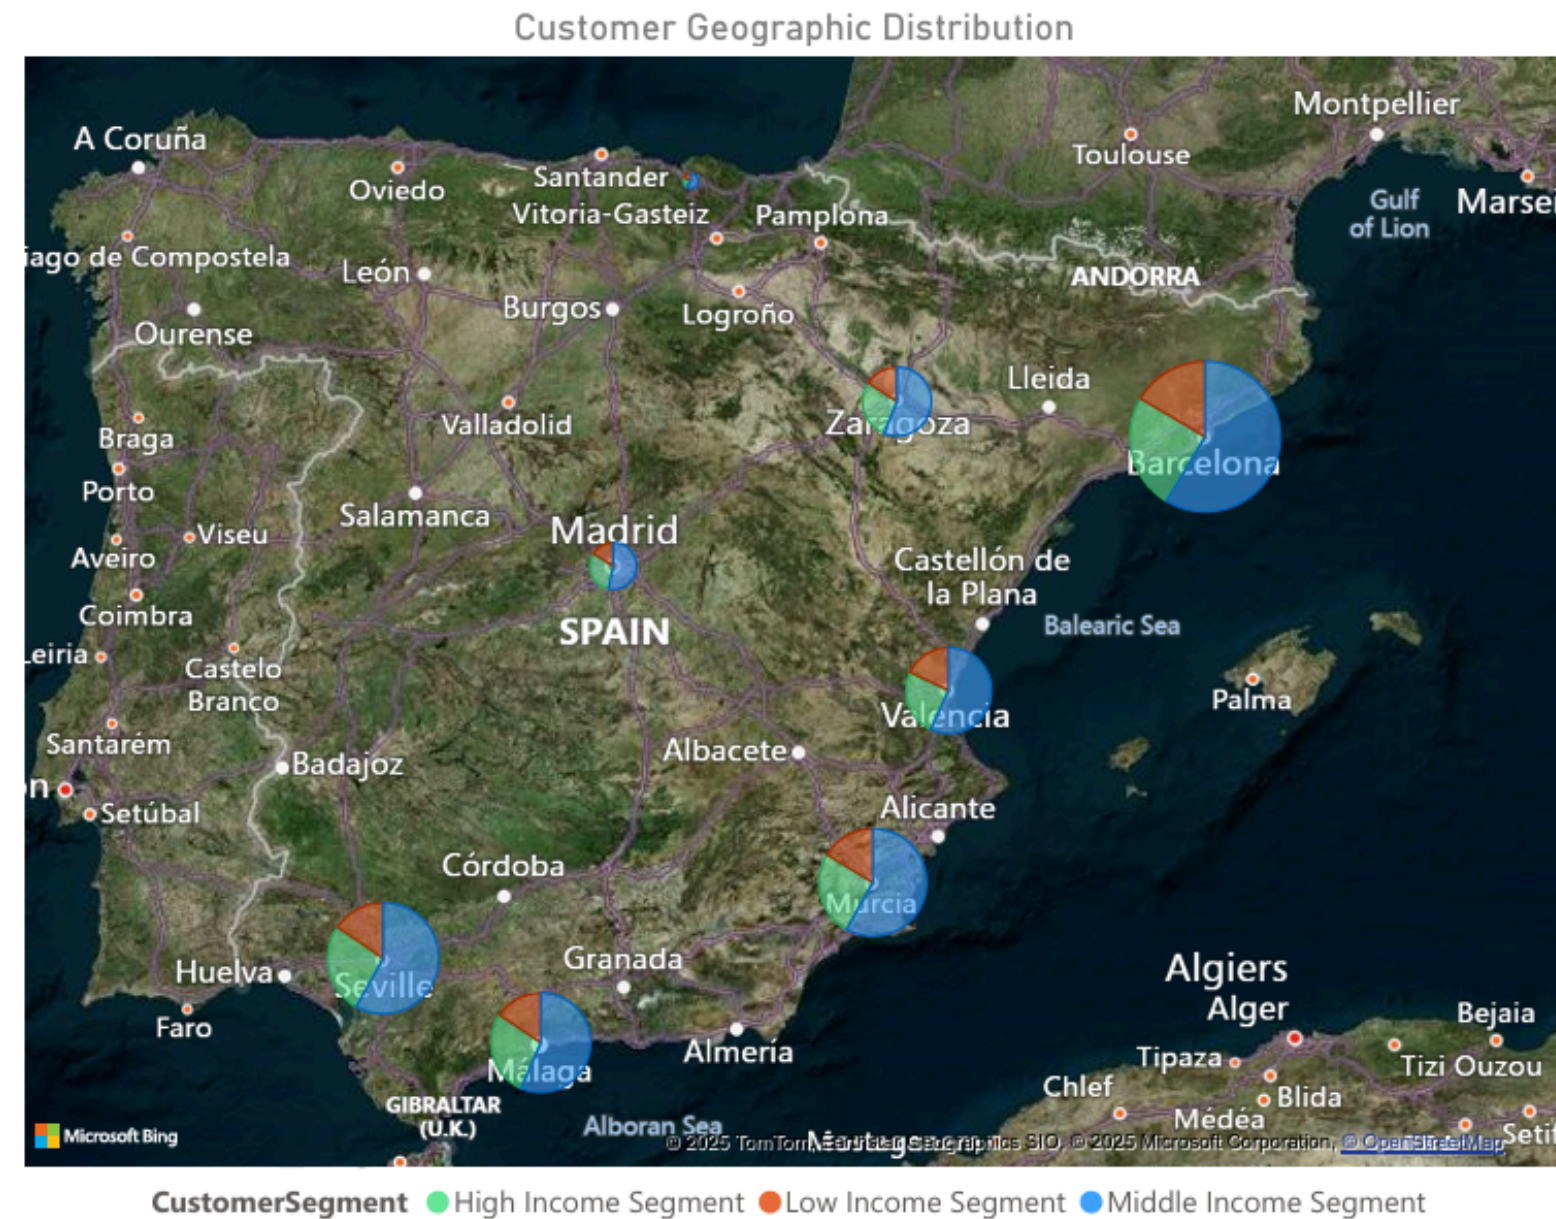

- Transaction value is concentrated in lower credit segments
- Late payment amounts peak in Fair and Very Poor segments
- Higher-value transactions still occur at lower customer scores, creating risk-weighted margin pressure

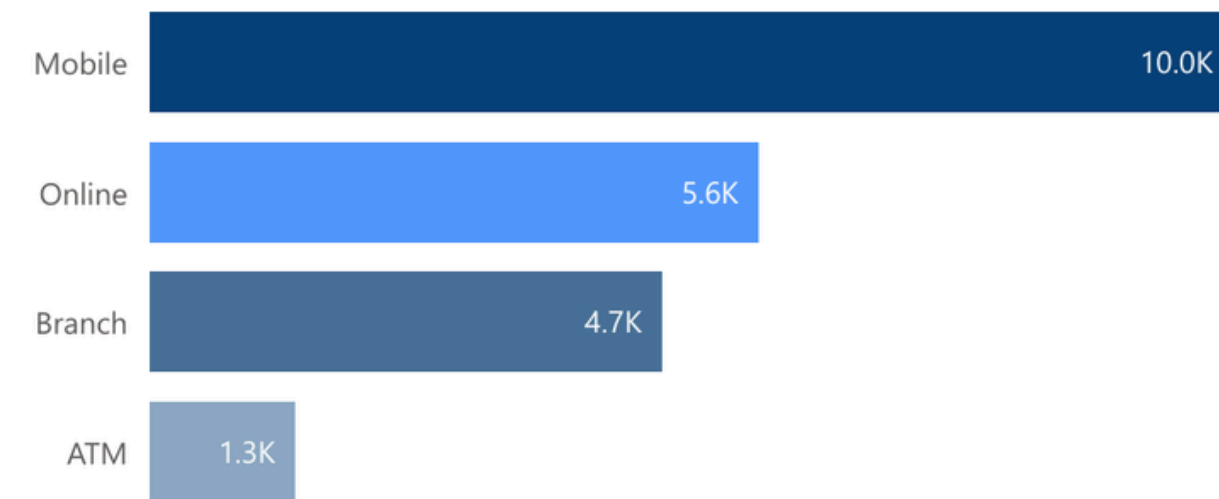

Customer behavior patterns

Channel choice matters more than geographic location.

Transaction Count by Channel

- Mobile and Online outperform Branch and ATM across cities
- Revenue per transaction remains consistent geographically
- No city shows materially different behavior patterns

Strategy and recommendations

Digital channels drive growth, while Branch remains high-value but cost-intensive.

Risk concentration in lower credit segments puts pressure on future margins.

- Digital-first channel strategy

→ Shift routine transactions to Mobile and Online to improve scalability.

- Reposition branch for high-value advisory

→ Focus Branch on complex, high-ticket transactions.

- Strengthen risk-based customer management

→ Apply tighter screening and risk-based pricing for low credit segments.

Thank you for listening

Bui Nguyen Thao Van
thaovanbn2201@gmail.com

